EASY / STANDARD

- 1 for every 3 points total remaining health and sanity you have.
- 2. If you fail, take 1 damage or 1 horror.
- 3. If you fail, gain 2 tags.
- 4. If you fail, exhaust your Brain-Machine Interface and you must switch from cyberspace to meatspace or vice versa.

Cerebral Static

A strange tingling sensation suffuses your skin. The hairs across your body stand on end, as if static had built up. Your joints ache just a little more than you think they normally do. The sensation of cyberspace feels just a little more harsh than before.

Mushin No Shin

The most enigmatic of the Big Four keeps its cards close to its chest. Rumors abound about the research that goes on here behind closed doors. What secrets lie within Jinteki?

When an Ambush is revealed: Look at the revealed side of any location. (Group limit once per round.)

Objective – Explore Jinteki's restricted area. Add as many story cards to the victory display as you can, then get out before you are found.

Agenda 1a

Another message pops up on your PAD: same sender as last time.

Hello detective! This one's also for you! (• 7 •)/*: ♦

♥ AN

Again, you find another black box at the marked location and are once again faced with the same choice.

Each investigator gains 1 tag.

You may choose an investigator to take control of the set-aside Autoscripter story asset. If you do, record in your Campaign Log the investigators accepted a gift. If it is already recorded, instead record the investigators accepted both gifts.

AGENDA

LOCATION

Meatspace. Central.

Beneath the offices and meetings rooms arranged according to the principles of neo-traditional Japanese minimalism, dozens of floors of laboratories and research facilities delve deep into the earth.

AGENDA

Ah Offer You Can't Refuse

You gasp and find you are back in the Jinteki basement. Checking your cyberspace location, you are still in the servers you were in before also. The faint screaming is still audible and the corridors still devoid of office workers. You shake it off and continue with your business before you attract attention.

Mark 1 assimilation in your Campaign Log. (Max once per game.)

ACT

Simulation Reset

You receive a message on your PAD. The sender is obfuscated, but the message appears safe and just contains text.

Hello detective! Jinteki servers are very deadly—it's dangerous exploring them without friends. Take this, it's a present from me!

♦* ¾(°*)j♦*

Underneath is what appears to be a jumble of nonsense letters, but after staring at it for a few minutes, you come to realise it's a pictographical depiction of your current location, with the corner of the room circled. Tucked away behind a bin, you find a black velvet box small enough to fit in your hand.

Each investigator gains 1 tag.

You may choose an investigator to take control of the set-aside TunnelVision story asset. If you do, record in your Campaign Log the investigators accepted a gift.

Another ping, another message. Who is this person anyway? You read what they have to say this time.
Uh oh. Get out! Get out!
You switch your focus back to meatspace and hear clusters of heavy footsteps growing louder. Shouting. Orders being given.
You duck around corner and look for a chance to leave the facility without being detained, and observe a unit of Musashi clones race down a corridor. Once their footsteps start dying away, you breathe a sigh of relief and sneak towards the entrance.
Only a few steps later, a sharp pain jolts through your skulljack, forcibly disconnecting you from the Network, and you fall to the floor.
As you slowly awake in your hopper, struggling to open your eyes, you spy a silhouette of a man with a katana slowly walk away back into the Jinteki HQ.

Chairman's Concerns

Chairman Hiro is pacing up and down the tanks full of clones, his brow furrowed. "Shouldn't they be calm now? That's what happened last time when the Tsunami hit, was it not?"

A man in a white lab coat walks half a step behind Hiro, gaze fixed on his PAD, frantically tapping at it. "Well, that is what happened last time, and in every case before as well: the volcano, the war, your—" He momentarily stops walking. "The... incident. The only reasonable conclusion has to be that the 23 seconds isn't the disaster they're reacting to. There's something even bigger coming."

Hiro comes to a stop in front of one of the tanks, watching the clone scream and hammer at the glass. "And have you managed to decipher what they're saying?"

"Yes... We think so, but... Well, we think they're saying, 'A new god approaches.' I've put out the usual feelers in NBN, but nothing so far on what that could mean."

"Very well. Thank you for your hard work. I suspect I may need to make a few calls."

Rambling Entry

Ada is making good progress. Answers are coherent, the right node clusters are lighting up when queries are thrown her way. I think we're reaching the local optimum of this combination of brain maps.

But every time, as she matures, random patches of the network start disappearing, for lack of a better way to put it. I know they used to be there but then the topology just changes and it's as if the addresses were never there. Almost like she's eating away at bits of the network. I've had to destroy and rebuild Ada multiple times. I know AIs can't break out of their containers, but... irrational, I know: I'm probably just being paranoid.

Message Log

Hi Marcus,
First of all, congratulations on your promotion—I bet the runner never saw it coming. I hope we'll continue to work together for years to come.
This time I'm writing on behalf of the Saraswati team I manage. One of my team reported that he's noticed unauthorized updates to the conditioning script for three clone lines (Collins, Sato, Tanaka) over the past two months. After looking into it, it seems like this might be even more wide-reaching—there are parts of the Tenma and Kimura scripts I don't recognise but take these with a grain of salt: it's been a while since I've worked on them.
The problem is that searching our source control doesn't turn up who made these changes and when... Could you do me a favor and look into this? Quietly? I'll owe you one! Maybe the secret pancake recipe you love?

Thanks,
Izzy
